

Jordan Beall, D.C.

Jordan Beall is a chiropractor at Clark Chiropractic Clinic in Odessa, Texas. She has been with Clark since May, 2016. Her passion has always been to help and serve others, and her concentration has been on educating people of all ages in how to achieve health and wellness. She was born and raised in Odessa and graduated from Permian High School in 2009. She then graduated with a Bachelor of Science in Kinesiology from Angelo State University in December, 2012. Her passion for chiropractic then led her to Parker University in Dallas, Texas, where she obtained her title of Doctor of Chiropractic along with a Bachelor of Science in Anatomy and a Bachelor of Science in Health and Wellness.

Jordan has a certification in Applied Kinesiology, a technique that uses muscle testing to evaluate the functions of the nervous system. She has a broad knowledge base in nutrition and the major role it plays in achieving and maintaining optimal health. Jordan is a member of the American Chiropractic Association, an organization that serves to support the field of chiropractic in the holistic approach of achieving wellness. She also continues to attend postgraduate seminars in order to stay up to date with the latest health information and healing techniques.

There are many different chiropractic techniques used to heal the body. Jordan uses a “soft touch” technique to adjust the spine that is gentle and safe for all ages. Having experienced poor health and persistent pain herself at a young age, she has found purpose in helping others to live a life that is fulfilling and pain free.
